FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

Asian equity markets rebounded strongly in November after a period of market weakness. Much of this was driven by hopes that the US and China may have found a ceasefire and agree to end trade tensions. Australia was not helped by weak commodity markets, while China and Hong Kong markets did well, led by performance in ecommerce names and financials.

For Asian Income, we saw a solid absolute return of 2.5% during November. However, this underperformed a strong benchmark performance that was led by gains in tech and banks. At the regional level, China, India and Hong Kong were very strong performers in the period. In respect of the Asian Income fund, our underweight allocation and selection in China and India was unhelpful to relative returns, while our exposure in technology, construction and industrial goods industries also detracted value. Positives included our exposure to real estate and banks in Singapore, alongside industrials and real estate in Australia. For individual contributors, Fletcher Building, Catcher Technology and Rio Tinto were detrimental to performance. On the flipside, we saw strong returns in the leisure sector, led by Macau gaming names and Qantas Airways. Elsewhere, China Mobile and Meridian Energy also outperformed. On trading activity, we added to our position in Melco Resorts and Entertainment.

KEY RISKS

- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Any such investments will be impacted by exchange rate fluctuations and this may affect the value of your investment and any income from it. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce the impact of exchange rate fluctuations but may not entirely eliminate it.
- We may take some or all of the ongoing charges from the fund’s capital rather than the fund’s income. This increases the amount of income, but it reduces the growth potential and may lead to a fall in the value of the fund.
