FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

Asia Pacific ex Japan equities were not spared from the global selloff in February, falling 1.6% over the month. At a country level, Korea and China were the worst performers, both down 3.8%. This was led by sharp falls in Samsung Electronics and Tencent. There were also significant sell-offs in the Chinese cyclicals, particularly in property and insurers, as the state-backed funds held back from providing support to the market. India also performed poorly, falling 3.2% as investors digested the impact of a large scale fraud at a state owned bank.

Taiwan performed better than the broader region, gaining 0.2%, as the Apple supply chain fared better than other technology names given they had already been sold off after the launch of the iPhone X. Australia was also a relative outperformer, falling 0.4%, as it had not participated in the global rally in January. ASEAN also performed relatively well given the region lagged the market in 2017. Elsewhere, it was a better month for Hong Kong and Singapore.

In respect of performance, the net midday return of L&G Asian Income fund was broadly in line with the index of -1.6%. However, this represented good outperformance relative to the peer group. Looking at attribution drivers, country allocation was a big positive, led by our overweight in Australia. Meanwhile, we also saw good stock selection in India. Conversely, our China and New Zealand exposure disappointed.

KEY RISKS

- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Any such investments will be impacted by exchange rate fluctuations and this may affect the value of your investment and any income from it. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce the impact of exchange rate fluctuations but may not entirely eliminate it.
- We may take some or all of the ongoing charges from the fund’s capital rather than the fund’s income. This increases the amount of income, but it reduces the growth potential and may lead to a fall in the value of the fund.
