FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

It was a month that saw mixed messages from the market. The latest reports of attempts to revive trade negotiations between the US and China helped the FTSE All Share end July at a six-week high, but the spectre of protectionism still lingers over the global economy. Meanwhile, the latest corporate reporting season and better UK consumer spending data provided a welcome distraction.

Sector divergences during July were significant, resulting in a defensive shift to investor portfolios. The main beneficiaries have been healthcare and consumer staples, whilst we have seen some improvement in Financials too. Large-caps did well, helped by FX moves that saw an extension of the sterling sell-off relative to the US dollar. Contrarily, the UK equity market's defensive merits proved less helpful in July as energy stocks dragged due to the less supportive supply backdrop, which pulled the oil price back from recent highs. Housebuilders performed better, but other domestic sectors continue to struggle.

For the fund, July saw disappointing relative return of -2.3%. This was driven by stock selection and sector allocation, which were both detrimental in the period. In terms of sectors, our travel & leisure, support services and mining exposure detracted most value. Meanwhile, in respect of positioning, our underweight in Healthcare delivered a negative contribution. At the stock level, Playtech was the largest underperformer following a profits warning. Urban & Civic, Biffa and Equiniti were additional detractors. Turning to positives, GVC and Draper Esprit added material value.

KEY RISKS

- The return from this fund is dependent on relatively few individual investments. This means that a fall in the value of an individual investment can have a major impact on the overall performance of the fund.
- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Any such investments will be impacted by exchange rate fluctuations and this may affect the value of your investment and any income from it. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce the impact of exchange rate fluctuations but may not entirely eliminate it.
