FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

It was a tough month for risk assets as volatility returned. Geopolitical turmoil coincided with fears of a slowdown in global growth, which was further compounded by worries about rising inflation and faster interest rate hikes.

After the initial threat of US steel and aluminium tariffs were directed at Europe, it wasn't long before Trump's attention shifted towards imposing $60bn of tariffs on Chinese imports. At present, it's difficult to quantify the ramifications, but the threat is deemed sufficient enough to keep investors in a defensive stance. Elsewhere, slowing PMIs (both manufacturing and services) and inflation data have somewhat undershot forecasts in recent weeks, with people questioning if the former has now peaked at robust levels.

Turning to market performance, the lack of leadership from previously key sectors (technology, financials) proved a challenge, especially for the US market. Meanwhile, the FTSE All Share index delivered its third consecutive negative month of returns. Tech, general retailers, banks, travel & leisure, media and telecoms were industries that all underperformed. Conversely, we saw a better month for pharmaceuticals, utilities, real estate and insurance stocks.

During the period, the fund endured a difficult month, underperforming its benchmark by 230bps. Stock selection and sector positioning were both equally negative factors. Much of the relative weakness was due to the significant fall of MicroFocus, though TP ICAP and WPP were additional detriments. On allocation, our underweight in healthcare and overweight in financials detracted value.

KEY RISKS

- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains. The impact to the fund can be greater where derivatives are used in an extensive or complex way.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Any such investments will be impacted by exchange rate fluctuations and this may affect the value of your investment and any income from it. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce the impact of exchange rate fluctuations but may not entirely eliminate it.
- We may take some or all of the ongoing charges from the fund's capital rather than the fund's income. This increases the amount of income, but it reduces the growth potential and may lead to a fall in the value of the fund.
