FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

Following the sharp Q4 sell-off last year, the FTSE All-Share index has enjoyed its best start to the year since 2013. February brought another period of positive returns for global equity markets, driven primarily by early signs of a renormalisation of risk. Trump's comments noting 'substantial progress' in US-China negotiations provided more optimistic news for investors. Interestingly, beneath the surface we have seen a number of end-market indicators and underlying data readings prove to be more robust this month.

In the UK, Brexit induced fatigue appear to be showing for consumers and is reflected in subdued business sentiment. Pro-'deal' MPs have started to show more coordination and Prime Minister May has come under pressure to agree to an extension of Article 50. As expected, sterling remains highly sensitive to newsflow, showing clear volatility.

Turning to markets, cyclicals largely outperformed, though consumer services saw mixed performance. The rally in oil price helped the energy sector, while improved sentiment towards China inevitably helped mining shares. Defensive stocks were broadly out of favour and 'value' underperformed other style tilts. At the size level, mid-caps topped the leaderboard despite seeing a number of stock-specific shocks.

For the L&G Growth Trust, the fund managed to record a small positive return in the period. Underperformance relative to its benchmark was predominantly driven by positioning and selection in the consumer services sector. The underweight allocation in healthcare was also unhelpful, given sector strength on the back of strong performance from Astrazeneca.

KEY RISKS

- The return from this fund is dependent on relatively few individual investments. This means that a fall in the value of an individual investment can have a major impact on the overall performance of the fund.
- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Exchange rate fluctuations will impact the value of your investment. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce this impact but may not entirely eliminate it.
