FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

Following the sharp sell-off in the fourth quarter last year, the FTSE All-Share index has enjoyed its best start to a year since 2013. February brought another period of positive returns for global equity markets, driven primarily by early signs of a renormalisation of risk. President Trump's comments noting 'substantial progress' in US-China negotiations provided more optimistic news, while markets managed to defy worry over fresh geopolitical concerns and mixed corporate earnings.

Within markets, cyclical companies largely outperformed, though the consumer services sector saw mixed performance. The rally in the oil price helped the energy sector, while improved sentiment towards China inevitably helped mining shares. Defensive stocks were broadly out of favour and 'value' saw small underperformance versus other style tilts. At the size level, mid-caps topped the leaderboard.

The L&G UK Special Situations fund delivered a net return of 1.0%. The benchmark returned 2.3%. Stock selection and sector allocation both detracted value, while our underweight in healthcare and overweight in consumer services also weighed on relative returns. Meanwhile, stock selection in materials and industrials was unhelpful. At a stock level, we saw positive contributions from Micro Focus and Taylor Wimpey on the back of trading updates that were better than expected. There were a few small negatives, which included IOE, Gym Group and Huntsworth. Not owning Astrazeneca and Lloyds was also detrimental. On activity, portfolio repositioning nears completion following fund manager change in December 2018.

He read Philosophy, Politics and Economics at Pembroke College, Oxford and is a member of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales.

KEY RISKS

- The return from this fund is dependent on relatively few individual investments. This means that a fall in the value of an individual investment can have a major impact on the overall performance of the fund.
- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Exchange rate fluctuations will impact the value of your investment. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce this impact but may not entirely eliminate it.
