FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

It was a tough month for risk assets as volatility returned. Geopolitical turmoil coincided with fears of a slowdown in global growth, which was further compounded by worries about rising inflation and faster interest rate hikes.

After the initial threat of US steel and aluminium tariffs were directed at Europe, it wasn't long before Trump's attention shifted towards imposing $60 billion of tariffs on Chinese imports. At present, it's difficult to quantify the ramifications, but the threat is deemed sufficient enough to keep investors in a defensive stance. Elsewhere, slowing PMIs (both manufacturing and services) and inflation data have somewhat undershot forecasts in recent weeks, with people questioning if the former has now peaked at robust levels.

The FTSE All Share index delivered its third consecutive negative month of returns. Tech, general retailers, banks, travel & leisure, media and telecoms were industries that all underperformed. Conversely, we saw a better month for pharmaceuticals, utilities, real estate and insurance stocks.

The fund underperformed by 40bps during the period. Stock selection was a small positive, though this was offset by weakness from sector positioning. We saw gains in financials and oil & gas sectors, with M&A helpful to returns. This benefit was partially offset by weakness in technology and select industrials. Meanwhile, our overweight in consumer discretionary and underweight in healthcare detracted relative value.

KEY RISKS

- The return from this fund is dependent on relatively few individual investments. This means that a fall in the value of an individual investment can have a major impact on the overall performance of the fund.
- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Any such investments will be impacted by exchange rate fluctuations and this may affect the value of your investment and any income from it. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce the impact of exchange rate fluctuations but may not entirely eliminate it.
