FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

January witnessed a strong rebound across just about every asset class, reversing December's weakness. The combination of attractive valuations and a dovish shift from the US Federal Reserve provided the impetus for a very strong start to the year. The overall impact was for a weaker dollar and range-bound treasury yields. This combination proved particularly bullish for emerging markets.

After three months of widening, credit spreads tightened in January from 117bps to 111bps. In terms of fund attribution, the portfolio benefited from strong overall stock selection as well as the outperformance of banks and the industrials goods and services sectors. Off-benchmark cross-currency exposure was also beneficial for performance given the outperformance of US dollar credit. On the negative side, stock selection in autos, our underweight in oil and gas, and overweight in defensive sectors such as utilities were all negative for performance amid the market rally.

Looking ahead, the dovish shift from Jerome Powell is clearly very important given the concerns we have about tightening liquidity conditions, particularly in the US. Therefore, tactically holding more credit risk makes sense to us at this juncture. However, we retain our cautious longer-term outlook for credit markets and would look to sell into further strength.

KEY RISKS

- This fund holds bonds that, rather than being traded on an exchange, are traded through agents, brokers or investment banks matching buyers and sellers. This makes the bonds less easy to buy and sell than investments that are traded on an exchange and on any particular day there may not be a buyer or a seller for the bonds. In times of market uncertainty or if an exceptional amount of withdrawals are requested it may become less easy for your fund to sell investments and the Manager may defer withdrawals, or suspend dealing. The Manager can only delay paying out if it is in the interests of all investors and with the permission of the fund trustee or depositary.
- The fund invests directly or indirectly in bonds which are issued by companies or governments. If these companies or governments experience financial difficulty, they may be unable to pay back some or all of the interest, original investment or other payments that they owe. If this happens, the value of your fund may fall.
- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from the currency of this share class. Any such investments will be impacted by exchange rate fluctuations and this may affect the value of your investment and any income from it. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce the impact of exchange rate fluctuations but may not entirely eliminate it.
- We may take some or all of the ongoing charges from the fund's capital rather than the fund's income. This increases the amount of income, but it reduces the growth potential and may lead to a fall in the value of the fund.
- Investment returns on bonds are sensitive to trends in interest rate movements. Their values are likely to fall when interest rates rise. Such falls may be more pronounced in a low interest rate environment. Bonds with a short time to go before their maturity date will fall by less than bonds with a longer time to their maturity date.
