FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

European markets were broadly flat in September. The overhang of key uncertainties hanging over global equity markets proved challenging, with it being notably difficult for 'growth' focused investors. In particular, the deteriorating relationship between China and the US appeared the most important narrative for risk assets. Markets have begun to treat this as much more than just a short-term nuisance, as positions appear to harden on both sides. Elsewhere, there were more headlines over Italy's fiscal intentions, which is a clear headache for its European partners. Meanwhile, the ECB's conviction that a "vigorous" pickup in inflation is imminent has yet to be supported by the data. Finally, Oil extended its gains, having seen the largest quarterly rally in a decade. Much of this is driven by concerns over supply risk following the looming sanctions on Iran and continued decline from Venezuela.

The European Trust endured a difficult month, delivering a negative return of -4.7%. Much of this was weakness (absolute and relative) was stock specific, with notable underperformance in consumer services and software industries. At the stock level, Vapiano fell heavily on the back of a profit warning over weak interim results. AMS was the other significant casualty, fuelled by concerns of trade-war impact and fears of slowing growth in the semiconductor supply chain industry. Internet stocks Delivery Hero and Home24 also sold off. In terms of positive contributors, payments business Adyen was the stand-out name, following a well-received capital markets day that highlighted the long-term growth opportunities.

KEY RISKS

- The return from this fund is dependent on relatively few individual investments. This means that a fall in the value of an individual investment can have a major impact on the overall performance of the fund.
- The fund could lose money if any institution providing services such as acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, becomes unwilling or unable to meet its obligations to the fund.
- Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based and can increase the size of losses and gains.
- The fund may have underlying investments that are valued in currencies that are different from sterling (British pounds). Any such investments will be impacted by exchange rate fluctuations and this may affect the value of your investment and any income from it. Currency hedging techniques may be applied to reduce the impact of exchange rate fluctuations but may not entirely eliminate it.
